

Parallel & Distributed Computing: Lecture 4

Alberto Paoluzzi

October 5, 2017

- 1 Markdown

- 2 Control Version System: Git

- 3 GitHub workflow

Markdown

Data Markup Languages

- Markup languages are designed for the processing, definition and presentation of text.

Data Markup Languages

- Markup languages are designed for the processing, definition and presentation of text.
- The language specifies code for formatting, both the layout and style, within a text file.

Data Markup Languages

- Markup languages are designed for the processing, definition and presentation of text.
- The language specifies code for formatting, both the layout and style, within a text file.
- The code used to specify the formatting are called tags.

Data Markup Languages

- Markup languages are designed for the processing, definition and presentation of text.
- The language specifies code for formatting, both the layout and style, within a text file.
- The code used to specify the formatting are called tags.
- HTML is a an example of a widely known and used markup language.

Data Markup Language Examples

1 XML

Data Markup Language Examples

- 1 XML
- 2 JSON

Data Markup Language Examples

- 1 XML
- 2 JSON
- 3 Document markup languages

Markdown

- Markdown \(Wikipedia\)

Markdown

- Markdown \(Wikipedia\)
- Statement by creator John Gruber

Markdown

- Markdown \(Wikipedia\)
- Statement by creator John Gruber
- Mastering Markdown

Control Version System: Git

Git Tutorial

git-crumbs by Marino & Spini

Simple daily git workflow

GitHub workflow

GitHub Tutorials

GitHub Guides